

ISMST Congress 2022 in Prague – Great Interest in TPS® and NEUROLITH®

The 24th edition of the ISMST congress took place in Prague this year.

From 8 to 10 September 2022, the Czech capital of Prague hosted the 24th edition of the ISMST World Congress (International Society for Medical Shockwave Treatment). Leading scientists and physicians from around the world presented the latest in research and practice in first-class lectures and workshops on all aspects of shock wave therapy. One of the highlights at the STORZ MEDICAL stand this year was the NEUROLITH® system. It was exhibited for the first time at an ISMST congress and generated great interest among the numerous international visitors to the stand. It became apparent that when looking at the congress programme and the venue itself, that, in addition to the classic indications, new indications from various specialist areas are also rapidly gaining in importance – including the treatment of the central nervous system of patients with Alzheimer's disease with Transcranial Pulse Stimulation (TPS®). In several lectures, key opinion leaders such as TPS® pioneer Dr Henning Lohse-Busch, Prof. Karsten Knobloch and Congress President Prof. Tomáš Nedělka explained the TPS® method in detail and presented the latest results and case studies from the respective treatment centres. The well-attended lectures impressively showed that there are many good arguments for the increased use of TPS® in the treatment of Alzheimer's patients based on the growing evidence for efficacy and safety. Furthermore, the advancing scientific research on the effect of TPS® in other neurological indications such as Parkinson's disease was discussed.
